A WARRIOR AND AN EMISSARY ARE CAUGHT IN AN INTERGALACTIC POWER PLAY WHERE THE STAKES ARE LIFE OR DEATH.

Blurb: Annwyn Silk is literally inches away from her dream of serving on the New Contact team and ditching her royal identity when an explosion rocks the ship. Now, the brooding, secretive Larunda Force team leader stands in her way with his suspicion that she's the culprit.

The last time Major Damius Elkwood allowed a civilian in on an investigation, one of his team members was hurt. Problem is, Annwyn is the only alchemist available. Worse, she charms his companion wolf, which he needs at his side, to help him keep his secret from spiraling out of control.

But as suspicions collide with evidence of scandal reaching the highest levels of planetary influence, they realize that without trust, none of them stand a chance. Because in this game, everyone's life is on the line.

About the Author

Tyra Burton

Tyra is an award-winning professor, social media muse, gamer-girl, and lover of all things geeky. She grew up playing card games, watching Star Trek and Quincy, ME, and reading Asimov and Agatha Christie. This strange combination produced a gamer-geek who loves mysteries, World of Warcraft, police procedurals, and science-fiction.

For her day job at the university, Tyra teaches on a variety subjects including social media, entertainment marketing, gaming, and gender and sexuality in pop culture. She is a social media strategist and co-author of Socially Engaged: The Author's Guide to Social Media with Jana Oliver. Penduli Station is her first novel.

She loves dark chocolate, Jameson & Ginger Ale, Ireland, and her two dogs and kitty. She wants to grow up to be Princess Leia, Wonder Woman, or, most likely, Penelope Garcia from Criminal Minds. An eternal DragonCon member, she met her husband there in 2009 at a Lord of the Rings concert. They live happily in their house in the woods with their socially engaging fur babies.
